SUPPLEMENTAL AFFIDAVIT

STATE OF MARYLAND, COUNTY OF WASHINGTON, to-wit:

COMES NOW, RICHARD P. DELANEY, M.D., and makes affidavit as follows:

We are more privileged, more blessed a state than we can know. Should we allow the culture of socialism to have its sway, we will have handed over a way of life based on true freedom -- freedom of soul, mind and heart. Handed it over for what? Chains! This is neither hyperbole nor dramatization for effect. If we permit a centralized government to control a patient's freedom to choose his physician and to control the physician's freedom to choose the most beneficial treatment for that patient, another onerous link will have been forged. What then might not be mandated by the state? The government's lawyers claim that I have no "standing." In this single manifestation of the destruction of that traditional deep bond (the doctor/patient relationship) existing between me and my sick patient, I see freedom being stolen from us; the trust that my patient places in my hands violated by bureaucracy. That bureaucracy takes no responsibility for the outcome and has no compassion for the pain and worry that illness brings. I am forced to practice my art deficiently but am told that I have no standing to say so. There are examples of many such invasions into the interplay between the sick, anxious patient and the concerned, compassionate physician apparent throughout this medical care catastrophe dubbed "Heath Care Reform."

To say that I have no standing calls to mind a tragic cartoon. The doctor is tied hand and foot to the railroad track while the juggernaut train bears down on him at ram speed. Yet the doctor may not petition the engineer to stop. After all, tied down as he is, he has no standing. Who are they who render this negative judgment on "standing?" What have they studied of anatomy, physiology, inorganic and organic chemistry, biochemistry, pathology, pharmacology, psychology, psychiatry and all other subjects which form merely the pre-education of the aspiring doctor? The physician's clinical education, by far the most taxing, is yet to come. The clinical training, in fact, never ends. It has been well said (Sir William Osler) that medicine is learned at the patient's bedside. It is a truth that no doctor, however long his practice, however eminent his station, can ever afford to neglect. It is a truth that certainly will be forgotten should the President and Congress force their brand of medicine on the rest of us. "Standing" refers to personal impact by or involvement in some particular affair. My profession, my vocation, my business, my very identity is deeply involved in and defined by the practice of medicine. It will be permanently disrupted by any of the various medical plans concocted behind closed doors and supported through bribery and blackmail. I have attached some of these invasions as an addendum to this statement. Please review the cases cited in the addendum. They are a sample of but a few of the instances in which the government is trying to capture the practice of medicine to aggrandize power to itself. It is not true to say that I have no standing in opposing this. That train is heading my way.
